The Importance of Advance HE Fellowship for KU Faculty

It is my pleasure to write about a subject of growing importance to our academic community: the pursuit of Advance HE Fellowship and its significance for both individual faculty members and KU as a whole. In an increasingly competitive and rapidly evolving higher education landscape, universities are expected not only to deliver knowledge but also to transform lives, foster innovation, and prepare future generations for global challenges. Achieving these goals requires highly skilled educators who continually reflect on, enhance, and show merit in their professional practice.

Advance HE Fellowship provides an internationally recognized benchmark for teaching and learning ability . It acknowledges the expertise , leadership, and impact of academics who are committed to enhancing the student experience and advancing educational quality. Whether at Associate Fellow, Fellow, Senior Fellow level, or Principal Fellow level, the framework recognizes professional achievement and encourages continuous development.

For individual faculty members, obtaining Fellowship offers several important benefits. It provides international recognition for quality teaching, which strengthens professional credibility, and supports career progression. More importantly, the reflective process involved in preparing for Fellowship encourages academics to evaluate their practices, identify areas for improvement, and show evidence-based impact on student learning and success.

For Kingdom University, increasing the number of Fellowship holders aligns directly with our strategic aims and institutional ambitions. Fellowship supports our commitment to educational distinction, quality assurance, and continuous improvement. It proves to stakeholders that our faculty members are engaged in internationally benchmarked professional development and that our teaching practices meet recognized global standards.

Furthermore, it contributes significantly to our strategic goal of enhancing institutional reputation and international recognition. As more faculty members achieve Fellowship status, KU strengthens its profile as a university that values the worth in learning and teaching. This supports accreditation efforts, ranking performance, and partnerships with leading institutions worldwide.

Another key strategic benefit is the enhancement of student experience. Fellowship holders are equipped with advanced knowledge of effective pedagogy, assessment practices, inclusive learning environments, and student engagement strategies. Their ability contributes directly to improved learning outcomes, higher student satisfaction, and stronger graduate success.

Moreover, Fellowship spreads a culture of leadership and collaboration. Senior and Principal Fellows, in particular, act as mentors and change agents who support colleagues, lead educational initiatives, and drive innovation across the institution. This helps build sustainable academic capacity and ensures that skill and knowledge become embedded throughout the university.

As KU progresses toward its vision of becoming a leading institution recognized for academic value and societal impact, Advance HE Fellowship is a strategic investment in our most asset: our people. By encouraging and supporting faculty members to pursue Fellowship, we are not merely recognizing individual achievements; we are building a stronger, more innovative, and globally respected university.

Let us therefore embrace Fellowship not as an award, but as a journey of professional growth, educational leadership, and institutional excellence.

Thank you.

Alumni Speech

I am currently working as the Head of the Human Resources Group at the Ministry of Information. My work is to supervise various aspects related to human resources, contribute to the development of the work environment and support employees in line with the goals and directions of the Ministry. My work also includes following up and developing procedures and systems related to human resources, coordinating between various departments, and contributing to the development of appropriate solutions to the challenges that may face the work environment.

After graduation, I was appointed as an accountant at BisB and then moved to work in the field of Human Resources at the Ministry of Health. In 2014, I joined the Ministry of Information, where I worked as a Supervisor of the Fixed Assets Unit for two years, and then in 2015 I moved to Supervise the Contracts and Tenders Unit until 2019. In 2019, I was appointed as the Head of the Training Center at the Ministry of Information, and continued in this role until 2025, before moving to my current position as Head of the Human Resources Group.

My specialization in finance and accounting has played an important role in my career, even as I later moved into different fields such as human resources, contracts, and training.

Studying accounting has helped me develop the skills of analysis, accuracy, understanding numbers and budgets, and making decisions based on data, skills that I have continuously benefited from in my work. Having rich experience in more than one field made me realize that a university major is an important foundation, but it is not necessarily the only path to a career, as success requires a willingness to learn and acquire new skills continuously.

My study journey at Kingdom University was an important milestone at the beginning of my career, not only academically, but also in building my personality and developing my communication, teamwork, and responsibility skills.

I advise students to view undergraduate stage as the beginning of the path rather than the end of it. It is important to choose the right major, but the most important is to invest the years of study in developing character and skills, building positive relationships, and taking advantage of every opportunity to learn and experience.

As for graduates, my advice is that a person may start in a different field than they studied, and their career may change more than once, and this is normal. The most important thing is to keep learning, develop skills, benefit from every professional experience, and be patient and persistent.

In my experience, I believe that professional success does not always come through a straight path, but through a set of experiences, opportunities, and challenges that refine a person and qualify him to reach advanced stages in his career.

Kingdom University remains an important part of my career, as it is where I started my academic journey, and from there I embarked on my professional life in 2011. Years after graduation, I am always proud to be one of the university's alumni, and I consider communicating with the university and participating in its initiatives and events a beautiful opportunity to give back a part of the favor to the place that played a role in my beginnings.

I hope to always see the graduates of Kingdom University in various positions of responsibility and success, and that the university will continue to support its students and graduates and prepare them for the requirements of the labor market, in a way that contributes to building a generation capable of continuing the march of development and achievement.
